Bush seeks assurance former Iraqi leader will remain in jail

WASHINGTON | President Bush insisted Tuesday he must have assurances Saddam Hussein will stay in jail and not return to power before releasing him to Iraq's interim government, refusing to commit to the June 30 timetable envisioned by Iraq's new prime minister.

Raising concerns about security arrangements once Saddam is out of U.S. custody, Bush said, "He's a killer. He is a thug. He needs to be brought to trial." Bush said it was legitimate to ask the interim government: "How are you going to make sure he stays in jail?"

Bush's reluctance to turn over Saddam raised new questions about the extent of Iraq's authority when the interim government claims sovereignty from the U.S.-led coalition on June 30.

Bush has encountered widespread skepticism from world leaders about whether the United States truly intends to relinquish control.

In Baghdad, Iyad Allawi, the interim prime minister, had said the United States would turn over Saddam by the transfer of sov-eignty. Saddam has been in U.S. custody at an undisclosed location in Iraq since his capture in December. Salem Chalabi, the Iraqi official in charge of setting up a tribunal to try former government figures, said he expected an arrest warrant filed against Saddam and other former officials before June 30.

Occupation spokesman Dan Senor suggested that U.S. authorities had grounds to hold Saddam far beyond the handover, saying Americans could keep him "until the cessation of hostilities," which, he said, weren't expected to stop on June 30. CURT ANDERSON (AP)

CONTESTS | Shell Game New York's Coney Island has its hot-dog-eating contest. New Orleans has an oyster-eating contest. Now Maine is getting into the act with the state's prized crustacean in the starring role. The Maine Lobster Promotion Council will hold five lobster-eating contests this summer. Spokeswoman Heidi Thompson says the contests are a natural. "I think a lot of people think of lobsters as a delicacy, but ... lobster is really about having fun in Maine," Thompson said. (AP) EyeOpeners | Page 2

GOLDEN YEARS Still Hard at Work

Many people in the United States begin retiring at 55, but Lebanese farmer Hamida Musulmani is still hard at work — at more than twice that age. Documents from Lebanon's 1932 census mark her birth year as 1877, Reuters reports. If those documents are accurate, Musulmani, at 126, would rank as the oldest person in the world. Despite her age, Musulmani, pictured below with her youngest descendent, Mohammed, still works on her family's farm, and remains in good health. "I am fine," she said, "it is only my eyes that cannot see properly." (EXPRESS)

Because every major city simply must play host to large Fiberglas animals, Manchester England now has cows — about 100 of them — strategically placed throughout its streets. They're part of the international public art exhibition CowParade, and were created by local and celebrity artists. The cows can be found grazing individually and in herds until the exhibit moooves on (sorry) in September. (EXPRESS)

TOYS But, Can We All Live in It?

It can't sail up to the sun or help you live a life of ease, but this small yellow submarine still held visitors to the Tokyo Toy Show spellbound on Tuesday. The battery-powered two-inch vessel, called the Radicon Submarine, can be told to surface and dive or swim right and left underwater via radio control. In the picture at right, a toy show visitor tries to angle the submarine through a hoop. Manufactured by Tokyo-based toymaker Masudaya Corp., it lives beneath the waves, and sells for $28. ANIMAL WATCH Roo in the Pool

A small kangaroo jumped more than 6.5 feet over a backyard fence in suburban Sydney, Australia — and landed in a swimming pool, a newspaper reported Sunday. David Punton discovered the wallaroo — a short, stocky variety of kangaroo found in the wild across Australia — in his pool after his two barking dogs woke him at dawn, The Sunday Telegraph said. The report didn't mention the size of the animal, but an adult wallaroo can grow up to 6 1/2 feet long from head to tail. A Sydney wildlife service volunteer rescued the wallaroo, the newspaper reported. (AP)

Do-Not-Spam Registry Rejected

FTC won't create list blocking junk e-mail, saying it could backfire

WASHINGTON | The Bush administration said Tuesday it will not create a national do-not-spam registry to discourage unwanted e-mail, fearing it could backfire and become a target list for new victims.

The Federal Trade Commission told Congress that senders of unwanted sales pitches might mine such a registry for names. Its chairman, Timothy Muris, quipped that consumers "will be spammed if we do a registry and spammed if we do not."

The commission was obligated by lawmakers to consider the proposal under the "can spam" legislation that Bush signed in December, an idea patterned after the FTC's enormously successful do-not-call registry to limit telemarketing calls.

But the FTC concluded that on the Internet, unlike within the highly regulated U.S. telephone network, regulators would be "largely powerless to identify those responsible for misusing the registry."

Muris said that, given the risks of consumers adding their names to a do-not-spam registry, "I wouldn't put my e-mail address on such a list."

Sen. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., the leading supporter in Congress for a no-spam registry, said the FTC's decision was disappointing.

Regulators instead proposed broad adoption of new technology that will make it more difficult to disguise the origin of unwanted e-mails. TED BRIDIS (AP)

Southern Baptists Quit World Alliance

INDIANAPOLIS | The Southern Baptist Convention quit a global federation of Baptist denominations Tuesday as SBC leaders denounced the Baptist World Alliance and other groups for accepting liberal theology.

More than 8,000 Southern Baptists also cheered as President Bush — speaking through a live video link — stressed his support for a constitutional amendment banning gay marriage.

The SBC is the world's largest

Baptist denomination and America's largest Protestant body, with 16.3 million members. On Tuesday, it took just a show of hands vote to approve the withdrawal.

The alliance is a federation of 46 million Baptists in 211 denominations.

The Rev. Paige Patterson, president of Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary, told the meeting the problem was a liberal drift within the alliance. (AP)

Kerry Focuses on Economy

Democrat criticizes tax cuts for loading workers with debt, deficits

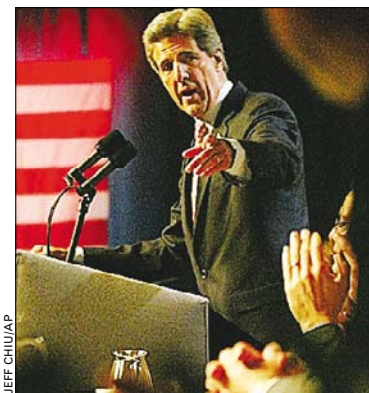

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. | Democratic presidential candidate John Kerry on Tuesday accused President Bush of ignoring American values in his economic policies by giving tax cuts to the wealthy and running up the deficit on the backs of workers and the needy.

"For middle-class Americans to be saddled with endless debt and deficits while the most fortunate among us walk away with billions in tax cuts. Where does that value come from? As president, I'm going to fight to put America's tax code in line with our moral code," Kerry told the New Jersey State AFL-CIO.

Bush, during a Rose Garden news conference, described the economy as strong and continuing to improve with the ingredients for economic growth. Asked why he hasn't pulled ahead of the Democrat in current polls, Bush pointed out that four and half months remain before Election Day.

"In other words, there's a long time before the election. I'm just going to do my job. My job is to continue to lead. My job is to say to the American people, 'Follow me, the world is going to be better,'" Bush said. NEDRA PICKLER (AP)

FORWARD MARCH: A boy mimics the cadence of a traditional marching band entertaining partygoers Tuesday at the annual White House Summer Picnic.

Major Web Sites Hit In Attack

SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA | Several major Web sites — including Yahoo!, Microsoft and Google — were inaccessible at times early Tuesday due to what the company that distributes them online called an attack.

The problem began about 9 a.m. EDT and lasted less than two hours, said Jeff Young, a spokesman for Akamai Technologies Inc., whose network of servers mirror some of the Web's top destinations to improve their performance.

Young called it a "large scale, international attack on Internet infrastructure." However, there was no evidence that non-Akamai infrastructure was affected.

Keynote Systems Inc., a Web performance measurement service, said the only sites where it saw trouble Tuesday were those served by Akamai.

Young said he had no immediate information on the nature of the alleged attack, nor did he know where it originated.

Major Web sites hire Akamai to distribute their content on its servers around the world. Users experienced either sluggish performance or time-out errors.

Hostage Threatened on Video

Militants demand release of al Qaeda prisoners

CAIRO, EGYPT | An Islamic Web site showed videotape Tuesday of a blindfolded American hostage in Saudi Arabia, and said abductors threatened to kill him unless Saudi authorities free al Qaeda prisoners within three days.

Paul Johnson, 49, of Stafford Township, N.J., was abducted Saturday by a group calling itself al Qaeda in the Arabian Peninsula. The organization is believed to be headed by al Qaeda's chief in the kingdom, Abdullah-aziz al-Moqrin, who was identified as speaking on the tape.

"My name is Paul Marshall Johnson Jr.," the seated hostage says in the tape, an elaborate tattoo on his left shoulder. "I am an American. ... I work on Apache helicopters."

The video showed a hooded man read a statement and hold an AK-47 rifle. His statement was similar to a message printed on the Web site that said the group would give Saudi authorities 72 hours — by Friday — to release "mujahadeen" militants or it would kill the hostage.

DOUSING THE FLAMES: Iraqi firefighters try to extinguish a fire north of Faw, Iraq, on Tuesday after explosions ruptured two pipelines carrying oil from the south.

Twin Pipeline Strikes Slash Iraqi Oil Output

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | Insurgents stepped up their campaign against Iraq's infrastructure Tuesday, blasting two oil pipelines and cutting the country's oil exports. Gunmen also attacked a convoy of civilian contractors, killing some of them.

Authorities curbed oil exports through the Persian Gulf by half — from an average of 1.85 million barrels per day to about 800,000 barrels — after saboteurs blasted the two pipelines on the Faw peninsula of southern Iraq early Tuesday.

Iraqi officials told Dow Jones Newswires they expected to have the damage repaired within a few days.

With violence in Iraq continuing and the U.S. power handover expected in a matter of days, a new poll released Tuesday provided a stark picture of anti-American sentiment in the country.

The poll, commissioned by the Coalition Provisional Government last month but not released to the American public, found that more than half of Iraqis believe they would be safer if U.S. troops simply left. It also found that 92 percent of Iraqis consider the United States an occupying force and more than half believe all Americans behave like those portrayed in the Abu Ghraib prison abuse photos. (AP)

Koreas Broadcast Last Propaganda Messages at DMZ

SEOUL, SOUTH KOREA | With warm words for South Korea, North Korean loudspeakers blared a final propaganda message that reverberated across the demilitarized zone just before midnight: "We, from one blood and using one language, can no longer live separated."

The last broadcast in decades of strident exchanges included harsh words for the United States — "the root cause of suffering and misfortune that our people are experiencing."

South Korea also halted broadcasts at about the same time.

The two Koreas agreed to stop the messages beginning Tuesday, the fourth anniversary of a summit between their leaders. The war of words along the heavily fortified no-man's-land dates to the 1950-53 Korean War that devastated the peninsula and left tens of thousands of troops arrayed along the frontier.

The North and South also plan to dismantle propaganda billboards along their border. (AP)

World's Deserts Growing, U.N. Says

UNITED NATIONS | The world is turning to dust, with lands the size of Rhode Island becoming desert wasteland every year and the problem threatening to send millions of people fleeing to greener countries, the United Nations says.

One-third of the Earth's surface is at risk, driving people into cities and destroying agriculture in vast swaths of Africa. Thirty-one percent of Spain is threatened, while China has lost 36,000 square miles to desert — an area the size of Indiana — since the 1950s.

Despite efforts to stop the phenomenon, desertification seems to be picking up speed — doubling its pace since the 1970s.

The United Nations is holding a ceremony in Bonn, Germany, on Thursday to mark World Day to Combat Desertification, and will hold a meeting in Brazil this month to take stock of the problem. (AP)

Bush Announces Afghan Aid Plan

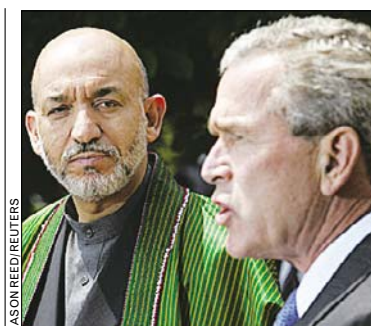

Effort seeks to slow the development of Taliban-led insurgency

WASHINGTON | President Bush on Tuesday called Afghanistan the "first victory in the war on terror," yet both he and Afghan President Hamid Karzai said the nation remains on a long, rocky path toward peace and economic prosperity.

"Afghanistan is no longer a terrorist factory sending thousands of killers into the world," Bush said.

The United States, which in recent months has increased its force in Afghanistan to about 20,000 troops, is helping to build the new Afghan national army and train new Afghan police and border patrol.

The president, who is using the battle against terrorism as a centerpiece of his re-election campaign, listed ways America would help Karzai. Those efforts included training programs for newly elected Afghan politicians, new books for Nearly 500 people have died in violence across Afghanistan so far this year. Many are victims of the Taliban-led insurgency; others have died in factional and tribal fighting linked to the country's booming drug trade.

The country's illicit cultivation of opium poppies supplied almost three-fourths of the world's opium last year and helps finance terrorists. DEB RIECHMANN (AP)

Federal Judge Delays Execution

Oken wins stay after Md. stalls on lethal injection protocol

GREENBELT, MD. | A federal judge delayed the execution of convicted murderer Steven Oken Tuesday in a ruling that criticized the state for withholding until the last minute a death penalty operations manual requested by the defense.

"Fundamental fairness, if not due process, requires that the execution protocol that will result in an inmate's death be forwarded to him in prompt and timely fashion," U.S. District Judge Peter J. Messitte said.

The state attorney general's office quickly appealed the ruling and asked the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to lift the stay so Oken's execution by lethal injection can take place this week as scheduled.

The judge's ruling came just one day after Oken's lawyers told Messitte they asked for the protocols that govern executions on May 10, but did not get a copy until last Friday. They are challenging the method of lethal injection, arguing that there is a possibility Oken will experience severe pain in violation of the 8th Amendment protections against cruel and unusual punishment.

Oken, 42, was sentenced to die for the 1987 rape and murder in Baltimore County of Dawn Marie Garvin, a 20-year-old newlywed. He also was convicted of killing his sister-in-law, Patricia Hirt, in Maryland and then killing Lori Ward, a motel clerk, in Maine.

Montgomery Says No to Wal-Mart

ROCKVILLE, MD. | Giant Food and the union that represents local grocery store employees have joined forces in support of a proposed ordinance aimed at keeping Wal-Mart supercenters out of Montgomery County.

The measure would impose tough new zoning restrictions on stores that are larger than 120,000 square feet and devote at least 10 percent of their floor space to groceries. It would exempt stores that do not sell food.

Wal-Mart has a standard-size store in Germantown, but has no plans to expand in the county, a spokesperson said. (AP)

Task Force Examines Pr. George's Fire

MOUNT RAINIER, MD. | A suspicious fire in an apartment building early Tuesday became the 39th blaze in the past 15 months to be investigated by the Washington area's arson task force.

The blaze broke out in a stairwell between the second and third stories of the 1960s-era, garden-style apartment building east of D.C.

Five people were treated for smoke inhalation, including four who had to be rescued by firefighters from the third floor. (AP)

'Va. Jihad' Members Get Lengthy Sentences

ALEXANDRIA, VA. | A Maryland man convicted of traveling to Pakistan and seeking to fight alongside the Taliban against U.S. troops just days after Sept. 11 was sentenced Tuesday to life in prison.

A second person convicted as part of what prosecutors called a "Virginia jihad network" was sentenced in U.S. District Court to 85 years in prison, and a third was sentenced to eight years.

The prison terms of life plus 65 years for Masoud Khan of Gaithersburg, Md., and 85 years for Seifullah Chapman of Alexandria are some of the longest terms obtained by the government in its war on terror. Hammad Abdur-Raheem of Falls Church was the third man sentenced.

Khan was convicted of the most serious charges, including conspir-

Gas Price Decline Expected

Energy Department forecasts gradual drop in costs at the pump

TRANSPORTATION | Gasoline prices, which dipped under $2 a gallon for the first time in weeks, "may be turning a corner" and should continue declining this summer, though motorists shouldn't expect dramatic decreases at the pump, the Energy Department said Tuesday.

Guy Caruso, administrator of the department's Energy Information Administration, told a Senate committee that retail gas prices fell by about three cents a gallon last week on a national average and that wholesale prices declined by 23 cents a gallon from their peak in mid-May.

These developments "should result in further reductions in retail prices in coming weeks," Caruso told the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee.

But Caruso warned that this price adjustment would not bring back cheap gasoline prices and that motorists should be prepared to spend close to $2 a gallon for some time. H. JOSEF HEBERT (AP)

ENTER KEYS: American singer Alicia Keys performed in London on Tuesday during a launch party for the European branch of Apple's iTunes online music store.

iTunes' European Migration

INTERNET | Apple Computers Inc. launched its highly anticipated iTunes Music Store in Europe on Tuesday, expanding the popular digital music service to users in Britain, France and Germany.

Apple chief executive Steve Jobs said iTunes would be available without subscription. The charge for downloading a single track would be 79 pence ($1.43) in the United Kingdom and 99 euro cents ($1.20) in Germany and France.

Jobs boasted that more than 85 million songs have been downloaded from iTunes in the United States. Along with the United States, France, Germany and the United Kingdom account for 60 percent of global music sales.

Apple joins a battle for the European online music market that includes competitors such as Microsoft and Napster, a division of Roxio Inc. All are jockeying for position in a battle that began in earnest a year ago with iTunes's launch in the United States. RACHEL GOULD (AP)

BY THE NUMBERS: Consumer prices, stoked by more expensive energy and food products, registered their largest increase in more than three years last month, a strong sign that inflation is springing back to life. The Labor Department reported Tuesday that the Consumer Price index, the government's most closely watched inflation gauge, shot up by 0.6% last month. (AP)

Armstrong Denies Charges

Book accuses Tour de France champ of doping

CYCLING | Lance Armstrong juggled controversy and ceremony Tuesday, promising to take action against “absolutely untrue” doping accusations and announcing a new sponsor.

Just 2 1/2 weeks before he begins his attempt to win an unprecedented sixth consecutive Tour de France, Armstrong strongly denied claims by a former assistant in a new book. Emma O'Reilly says in the French-language book “L.A. Confidential, the Secrets of Lance Armstrong,” that Armstrong once asked her to dispose of used syringes and to give him makeup to conceal needle marks on his arms.

“I can absolutely confirm that we don't use doping products,” Armstrong said at a news conference at the Silver Spring, Md., headquarters of Discovery Communications, which will begin sponsoring his team next year.

“We're sick and tired of these allegations and we're going to do everything we can to fight them,” he said. “They're absolutely untrue.”

The allegations took some of the shine away from the announcement of a three-year, multimillion-dollar deal with Discovery, which will replace the U.S. Postal Service as the sponsor of Armstrong's team.

The prospect of not having a sponsor left the 32-year-old Armstrong contemplating retirement, but now he says he'll ride in next year's Tour de France and possibly beyond. JOSEPH WHITE (AP)

Lance Armstrong was in Silver Spring, Md., on Tuesday to announce his new sponsorship deal with Discovery and to knock down recent doping accusations.

BASEBALL Yankees' Brown Is Out

Pitcher Kevin Brown was put on the 15-day disabled list by the New York Yankees on Tuesday because of a strained lower back. The move was made retroactive to June 10, a day after Brown was forced to leave a start against Colorado after two innings. The Yankees have the best record in the major leagues, but the health and depth of their rotation has been their top concern. Mike Mussina left his start Friday night against San Diego after three innings when he felt tightness in his right groin. (AP)

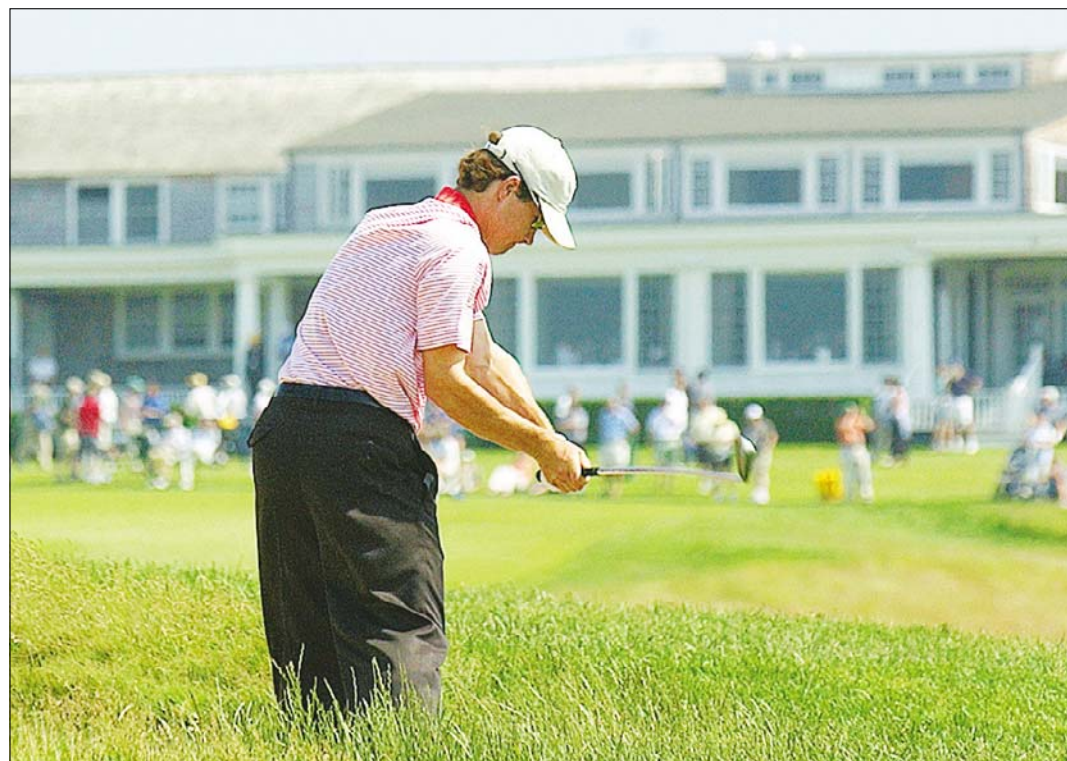

BASEBALL Mets Fire Batting Coach

Frustrated by a season-long struggle to score runs, the New York Mets fired batting coach Denny Walling on Tuesday and replaced him on an interim basis with bench coach Don Baylor. The Mets went into Tuesday night's game batting .246. (AP)

Former Washington Redskins tackle George Starke pleaded guilty to misdemeanor drug charges Tuesday and agreed to enter a rehabilitation program. D.C. police stopped Starke on May 14 when an officer noticed he was not wearing his seat belt, according to charging documents. He was also charged with driving on a suspended license, and a search of the car revealed seven grams of cocaine, prosecutors said. (AP)

Most Concussions Never Reported

COLLEGE FOOTBALL | Most serious head injuries in college football are never reported to team trainers or coaches because the players don't think their symptoms are severe enough to indicate a concussion, according to a new Indiana State University study.

That lack of knowledge could be putting athletes at risk for more severe injury, or even death, researchers say.

“When your head is messed up, you may not know it yourself,” said JoEllen Sefton, a doctoral fellow in sports medicine who surveyed 457 players, 38 coaches and eight trainers from eight NCAA Division I-A, I-AA and II colleges.

Coaches, players, athletic administrators and medical personnel have long known the risks of injury to the brain. But Sefton's 2002 survey, to be presented Saturday at the National Athletic Trainers Association meeting in Baltimore, indicates nearly three of every four concussions go unreported.

A concussion is a blow to the head that jostles the brain and can cause brain swelling, blood vessel damage and even death. Symptoms can include headache, confusion, loss of consciousness and nausea.

Agassi Pulls Out of Wimbledon

Hip injury sidelines struggling superstar

TENNIS | Whether it's his ailing hip or his ailing game, Andre Agassi decided he wasn't ready for Wimbledon. Who knows whether he'll bid an on-court farewell to the All England Club?

Agassi pulled out of the year's third Grand Slam tournament Tuesday, joining the two top-ranked women — Justine Henin-Hardenne and Kim Clijsters — on the sideline.

Agassi, whose eight Grand Slam titles include Wimbledon in 1992, dropped his last four matches — his longest losing streak in seven years.

Fair or not, the ninth-ranked Agassi now will face questions about how much longer he plans to play. He hasn't won a tournament since April 2003, his biggest stretch since an 18-month gap ended in February 1998.

Agassi's rut includes his earliest exit at a Slam since 1998, bowing out on Day 1 of the French Open to Jerome Haehnel, a career minor leaguer who called himself “a bad player.”

So, will Agassi be back at the All England Club after missing this year's Wimbledon? “My hope and plans,” Agassi said Tuesday, “are to see you next year.”

Netherlands, Germany Tie

Czechs edge Latvians in other Group D match of Euro 2004

Van Nistelrooy scored after Andy Van der Meyde won the ball near the right corner and sent a perfect cross into the box. Van Nistelrooy, with his back to goal, connected with his right foot, putting the ball behind German goalkeeper Oliver Kahn.

Germany took a 1-0 lead in the 30th minute on Torsten Frings's angled free kick. The 30-yard shot flew across the goalmouth and went in off the post, beating goalie Edwin Van der Sar.

Ruud Van Nistelrooy of the Netherlands scores the tying goal in Tuesday's match.

In the day's other Group D game, the Czech Republic beat Latvia 2-1 in Aveiro. The Czechs avoided a big upset with goals in the last 17 minutes by Milan Baros and Marek Heinz. Latvia is playing in its first major championship. NESHA STARCEVIC (AP)

Washington Post sports columnist MICHAEL WILBON was online Tuesday to discuss the NBA Finals, the U.S. Open and other sports news.

Does this series prove that Phil Jackson is the most overrated coach in NBA history?

How big a fool are you? He, at the moment, is 9-0 in NBA Final competition with more championship rings than anybody except Red Auerbach. So, what are you talking about? Clearly, you don't know anything about pro basketball. He and his team are being beaten by another great coach and a better team. Period.

What do you think Tiger's odds are at the U.S. Open? I keep hearing that some "no name" is going to take it all, but I have a weird feeling that Tiger Woods has something in store for everyone to watch.

That would be fine with me, although I'm picking Sergio Garcia to win. I can't wait for Thursday because the field is loaded with serious contenders

Why hasn't Carmelo Anthony been invited to join the USA basketball team for the 2004 Olympics?

I don't know and I have not had a satisfactory explanation. If he is not invited, it is just stupid. It's insane and it's inexcusable.

Bad air out. Renewable energy in.

Clean air clears the way for summer fun! D.C. can clean the air by making the switch to renewable energy.

It's a slam dunk.

Clean energy will:

Reduce Code Purple and Red Days:

During these days, air quality exceeds EPA's health-based standards, making it unsafe to enjoy the outdoors.

Improve the Health of District Residents:

Clean energy cleans our air and protects our health, especially that of young children and the elderly. Particles from power plants send over 3,700 people to the emergency room each year and are responsible for almost 20,000 asthma attacks in the D.C. metropolitan area each year.*

Reduce Energy Bills: Renewable energy is both feasible and affordable. It moves us towards decreased reliance on foreign fossil fuels and would help stabilize spiking natural gas prices.

Create Jobs: Clean energy production is more labor intensive than traditional energy production. Wind and solar power each provide 40 percent more jobs per dollar than does coal.

Greek, 95, to Carry Torch

Clentzos participates in relay 74 years after competing in Olympics

OLYMPICS | In 1932, a 23-year-old Greek pole vaulter named Peter Clentzos marched into the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum for the Summer Olympics.

On Wednesday, Clentzos will be back — a day after turning 95. The man believed to be the oldest living Greek Olympian is expected to be the oldest person in the Olympic torch relay when it begins in the U.S.

Peter Clentzos, 95, is believed to be the oldest living Greek Olympian.

For Clentzos, who will walk with the flame about 400 yards outside the Coliseum, the relay is another chance to honor the country that gave birth to the Olympics and hosts them Aug. 13-29.

"It is one of the biggest thrills of my life," he said. "To know that the flame will end up in a country that will be born again with the Olympic spirit is just amazing."

Also carrying the torch in L.A. are Tom Cruise, Sylvester Stallone and Ellen DeGeneres.

The flame moves to St. Louis on Thursday, Atlanta on Friday, and New York on Saturday before being sent to Montreal and eventually on to Athens. GREG RISLING (AP)

Cars

The Dodge Viper of Trucks

Is the Ram SRT-10 a pickup or a really unwieldy sports car?

ROAD TEST | The 2004 Dodge Ram SRT-10 is an awesome piece of machinery.

From its neck-snapping torque and engine roar to its stylized body and 22-inch wheels, it's a provocative cross between a pickup truck and a sports car.

This special version of light-duty Ram with a starting manufacturer's suggested retail price, including destination charge, of $45,510 holds a Guinness world record for fastest production pickup.

The SRT-10 averaged 154.6 miles an hour on a closed course and driven by a race car driver in a Guinness record-setting exercise earlier this year.

The 8.3-liter, overhead valve V-10 in the SRT-10 comes from the Dodge Viper sports car and packs the same 500 horsepower and 525 foot-pounds of torque at 4,200 rpm that the two-seat Viper does.

The next most-powerful full-size Ram pickup has a 345-horsepower, 5.7-liter Hemi Magnum V8 with maximum torque of 375 foot-pounds at 4,200 rpm.

But oh, how the wheels can Grrr! I'm a big fast red truck!

squeal and the truck can rush forward in a noisy huff. It's almost as if the aggressive SRT-10 is projecting to the other drivers ahead that they should get out of the way to be safe.

It took some getting used to the firm feel of the clutch pedal in the SRT-10 test vehicle. A driver can't have weak left leg muscles here.

Even a light touch on the accelerator pedal brings the engine roar immediately. Power comes on quickly but not quite instantaneously.

The SRT-10 can get into speeding ticket territory quickly, too. Unless a driver's eye is on the 160-mph speedometer regularly, it's difficult to determine just how fast the truck is going, especially in residential neighborhoods where 25 mph feels like the truck is just idling along. Car Care Automotive expert PAT GOSS owns Pat Goss Car World, Inc., a local car repair company. He chats regularly on washingtonpost.com/cars.

I own a 2003 Nissan Pathfinder and I travel from medical school in West Virginia to home in Maryland. Needless to say, I encounter lots of deer along the way. I recently hit one, causing $4,000 worth of damage to the front. Do you think a bull bar could minimize damage?

Bull bars and the like are to deflect tree branches and brush. They would have no effect on deer. If you put something on the front strong enough to stop a deer, you would transmit too much energy into the car and put you and your passengers in serious peril.

My odometer broke a few days back. What would cause an odometer to break? What is done to fix it?

Mechanical odometers typically fail as a result of bad gears inside the speedometer. On electronic odometers it can be the result of numerous problems. In most cases it will require replacement of the speedometer assembly. The cost can be moderate to ridiculous depending on year, make and model. If there is any way to avoid the odometer being reset, by all means do it. A reset odometer means a significant decrease in value because the mileage will always be listed as TMU (true mileage unknown).

Springsteen's Highway Hagiography

CAR CULTURE | From "Thunder Road" to "Racing in the Street," in pickups and pink Cadillacs, Bruce Springsteen spent the last 30 years riding with his fans down life's highways, dirt roads and dead ends.

On June 17, the Newark Museum opens its first major exhibition dedicated to the poet laureate of the Garden State Parkway, "Springsteen: Troubadour of the Highway."

The show is a serious examination of Springsteen's automotive imagery, placing him in a tradition of American artists who employed the highway as a metaphor for Americans' alternately optimistic, restless and rootless spirit.

"In 'Thunder Road,' recorded on his breakthrough 1975 album, 'Born to Run,' the highway is a path to liberation," organizer (and Springsteen fan) Colleen Sheehy wrote in the show's program.

By the time of 1995's "The Ghost of Tom Joad," Sheehy wrote, "the highway promises nothing. It's illusory, confusing, heartbreaking." STEVE STRUNSKY (AP)

Highs and Lowe

One successful and one failed drama later, Rob Lowe goes back on TV

CAREERING | A grungy man with a stubbled face and lank hair enters a homeless shelter. Moments later he's locked in mortal combat with a priest, the pair hurtling through shattering glass to the street below.

At the start of TNT's adaptation of Stephen King's "Salem's Lot," the priest's patrician profile is easily recognizable — actor James Cromwell. But it might take a second glance to realize the grungy guy, Ben Mears, is the usually clean-cut Rob Lowe.

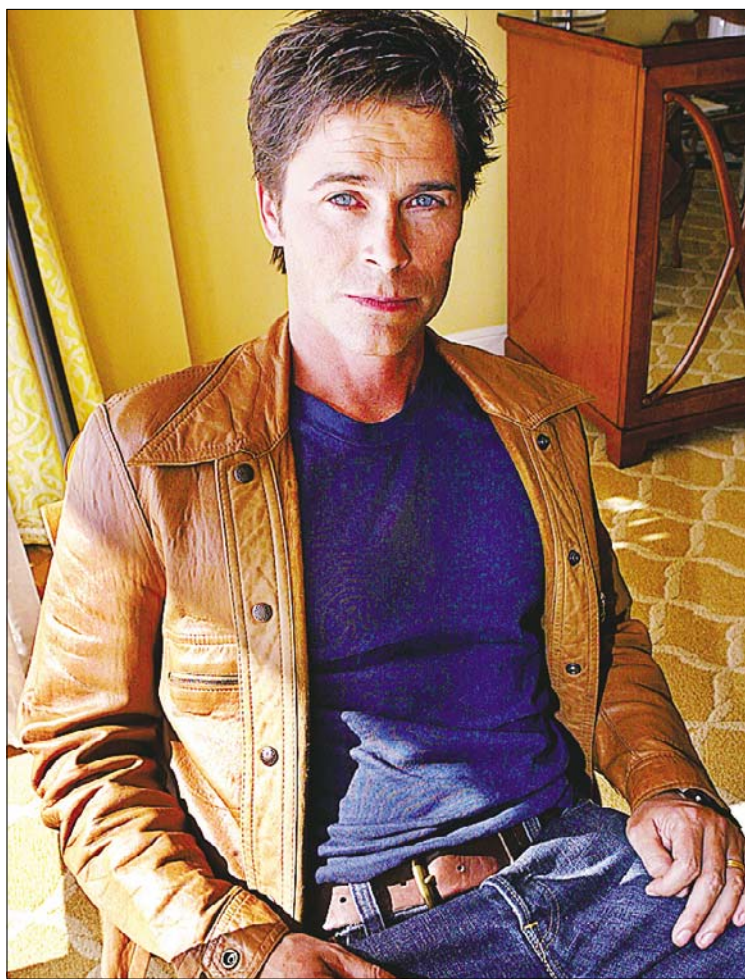

Mears, the protagonist of King's 1975 novel, is a writer driven to explore hidden horror in his small Maine hometown.

Back to his boyish self, Lowe has taken over a hotel suite to discuss the four-hour miniseries, which airs Sunday and Monday, 20-21 at 8 p.m.

He offered his view of horror shows: "I like 'em if they are smart. I hate them, hate them, if they're not. I don't like slasher movies. I don't like gore, but I love unrelenting, uncomfortable suspense and terror."

As a King fan, Lowe actively sought the role of Nick Andros in the 1994 TV adaptation of King's "The Stand."

This time TNT approached

COME BACK, KID: Putting his faith in cable and CBS, Lowe keeps a TV presence.

him, although co-executive producer Mark Wolper acknowledges he wasn't certain the 40-year-old actor would be ideal as Mears, willing to "scruff himself up."

But Lowe was immediately in sync with Wolper's concept of not looking at all like he did as smooth presidential aide Sam Seaborn on NBC's "The West Wing."

The miniseries was shot near Melbourne, Australia. The exterior of the ominous house on the hill, which seeps its evil over the town, was constructed in a sheep meadow. Fences had to be put up to keep out not just sheep but kangaroos.

The book previously was adapted as a TV movie in 1979, starring David Soul and James Mason. This time, Lowe's co-stars include Donald Sutherland, Andre Braugher, Rutger Hauer and Samantha Mathis.

On the new CBS fall series "Dr. Vegas," he plays a physician with a "double nature" — "William when he's the doctor and Billy when he's out burning the candle at both ends."

He's philosophical about the failure of last year's NBC series "The Lyon's Den," which he produced and starred in as idealistic lawyer Jack Turner. But he's hoping to get "a little lucky" with "Dr. Vegas." BRIDGET BYRNE (AP)

Moore's Uncharacteristic Silence

'911' filmmaker was recipient of leaked Abu Ghraib videos

PRIOR KNOWLEDGE | Michael Moore says he had footage of prisoner abuse in Iraq but decided to stay quiet until his new movie came out.

"I had it months before the story broke on '60 Minutes [II],' and I really struggled with what to do with it," Moore told the San Francisco Chronicle last weekend. "I wanted to come out with it sooner, but I thought I'd be accused of just putting this out for publicity for my movie. That prevented me from making maybe the right decision."

"Fahrenheit 9/11," Moore's documentary, won the top prize at the Cannes Film Festival in May. The film, scheduled to open in theaters on June 25, is critical of President Bush's response to the Sept. 11 terror attacks.

"The stuff with the detainees in my movie is even more shocking than what we saw in that [Abu Ghraib] prison because it happens outdoors and is more commonplace," Moore claimed. (AP)

Silent Moviemaker

M. Night Shyamalan agreed to be filmed — then loudly disagreed

RIFTS | The Sci-Fi Channel was thrilled when M. Night Shyamalan, maker of films “The Sixth Sense” and “Signs,” agreed last fall to open his world to a documentary’s cameras.

Then it all went sour.

Shyamalan quit on-screen, and an expected benign profile has become a three-hour expose, “The Buried Secret of M. Night Shyamalan.” Sci-Fi has scheduled a July 18 air date for the documentary.

Having the cameras turned on himself — although he usually does brief cameos in his movies — was something new for Shyamalan.

Different agendas might have been there from the start. While Shyamalan said last December he hoped the project “will demystify some of the mysteries of the film-making experience,” Sci-Fi said it wanted to dig out the source of his inspiration. It was all tied to the release this summer of “The Village,” Shyamalan’s latest film.

After documentarians Nathaniel Kahn and Callum Greene started, the project became less about film-making and more about the filmmaker, said Greene.

Greene said he started to go off the “suggested” list of friends to speak with and contacted others in Shyamalan’s life. The filmmaker was angered by the personal nature of what they were asking, he said.

I'VE GOT A SECRET: Sci-Fi's coverage of Shyamalan didn't begin as an expose.

“Slowly, his cooperation dried up,” Greene said. “We saw that as a challenge and just didn’t let go.”

The tension reached the point where Shyamalan walked away during an interview and hasn’t done any others for them.

Greene said he recorded “unguarded moments” that revealed what Shyamalan was like. Neither he nor the Sci-Fi Channel would be specific about what they found, and wouldn’t say what the “buried secret” was.

There may be an element of hardball at play.

Going public with an air date and title “is part of a strategy to apply some pressure to help us with what we need to accomplish,” said Sci-Fi spokesman David Westover. Things could change if Shyamalan sat down for another interview; Westover said the program’s content isn’t completely locked. DAVID BAUDER (AP)

Madonna Sells Maverick Records

LOSS OF CONTROL | Warner Music Group has agreed to buy Madonna out of Maverick Records, the label she co-founded 12 years ago, to end the legal battle that pitted the music conglomerate against its biggest star.

Madonna's Maverick Records debuted with a flourish and included the multiplatinum debut of Alanis Morissette's "Jagged Little Pill" in 1995. More recently, the company has scored hits with Michelle Branch.

Madonna and partners Guy Oseary and Ronnie Dashev have owned 60 percent of the company; Warner Music owned 40 percent.

In March, Maverick filed suit against Warner Music and its former parent, Time Warner Inc., claiming breach of contract and alleging that they had misstated Maverick's profits and mismanaged the company, costing Madonna and her partners millions of dollars.

Warner Music filed a lawsuit of its own against Maverick, claiming the company had lost tens of millions of dollars.

In an agreement announced Monday, Warner Music said it would buy Madonna and Dashev out of their share of the label. Madonna will have no role in the company, while Oseary will keep his share and stay with Maverick as CEO. NEKESA MUMBI MOODY (AP)

Curves Ahead

DRIVIN' 'N' WHININ' | What can be said about "Simple Life 2: Road Trip" that hasn't been said already? The show returns for its second season on Fox tonight with two half-hour episodes airing at 8 p.m. and 9 p.m., before settling into a regular 9 p.m. slot next week.

This time, best friends and professional twits Paris Hilton and Nicole Richie set off from Miami Beach in a pink pickup towing an Airstream trailer.

Destination: Beverly Hills, with 3,000 miles of open road and misadventures waiting in between. (A dingy sound comes from the dashboard. "What is that?" "Fuel level low." "You serious?!")

TRIPPY CHICKS: "Do I look fat in this car?"

Is this another hilarious session of Outward Bound for Bimbos? Or a tiresome reprise of a shallow idea already tapped out? Take your pick and adjust your viewing plans accordingly. KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

ON TV TONIGHT

FISH OUT OF WATER OR CLASS WAR? YOU BE THE JUDGE

More than 30 years after its cancellation, "The Beverly Hillbillies" lives on. Two out of three Fox comedies debuting tonight are blatant imitations of the story about a man named Jed.

One of these is "The Simple Life: Road Trip" (see article, left). The other is Fox's METHOD & RED (9:30 p.m.) — "Hillbillies" with a hip-stop twist. The comedy duo Method Man and Redman portray rap moguls who move into a starchy nouveau riche community.

"Method & Red" features Anna Maria Horsford (formerly of "Amen") as Method's hardworking mother. Method explains how he bought his nice house for her, but this does not compensate for the steady barrage of hip-hop minstrel-show stereotypes that dominates

CHRIS CUFFARO/FOX

WE'RE DOPE! Or is it dopes? Maybe dope is what's making all the smoke ...

the proceedings: Doors open to clouds of pot smoke, scantily clad women boogie at nonstop parties, and televisions tuned to basketball games can be found in every nook and cranny of Method's McMansion.

AND MOM AND DAD MAKE SEVEN QUINTUPLETS (8:30 p.m., Fox). After the ratings failure of his funny series "Andy Richter Controls the Universe," Conan O'Brien's former sidekick seems to have learned a sitcom lesson: Never attempt to create anything challenging, intelligent or original. Richter and Carol Chase star as Bob and Carol, whose use of fertility drugs confronts them with an instant brood. For those keeping score, two of the quints are "hot," one of them is surly, one is a dwarf who is perpetually randy and the fifth appears to be emotionally disturbed. Help yourself.

YO, GAFFER! Contestants spend two weeks training to become their favorite screen star in their favorite movie scene in the new series INTO CHARACTER (10 p.m., AMC). Tonight: "Rocky." KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

HOT BRITISH MEN

Colin Firth Was Robbed!

ORLANDO BLOOM is well ahead of rivals in an Internet vote to find Britain's sexiest actor. The 27-year-old actor, who shot to fame as Legolas in "The Lord of the Rings" films, won 35 percent of the votes, beating other popular actors, including Hugh Grant, Ewan McGregor and Jude Law, according to the Sky Movies Web site on Tuesday. Bloom, who grew up in Canterbury, southern England, has said he was "chubby" as a child and joked that he acts in films because it allows him to kiss beautiful women. (AP)

GYM SPORTS

Maybe It's Fun for You

"Dodgeball becomes a vehicle for them to learn some life lessons and stand up for themselves!" said VINCE VAUGHN of his new film, "Dodgeball: A True Underdog Story." Of course, he's a big strapping lad, seen here at the film's Monday premiere in Los Angeles. Scrawnier co-star Ben Stiller knows the truth: The film "really shows the pain and humiliation associated with having a ball slam you in the face in front of lots of people." (EXPRESS)

MICHEL EULER/AP

If he's that sexy, why does he wear all that jewelry? And that squint—yuck.

PENITENTS

Don't Put Anything Else In Those Veins, Either

Country music singer GLEN CAMPBELL was sentenced Tuesday to 10 nights in jail and two years of probation for a November drunken-driving hit-and-run collision. "Believe you me,

I think that's the last you've seen of Glen Campbell putting alcohol in his veins," Campbell told Judge John Buttrick at his sentencing Tuesday in Phoenix. Campbell pleaded guilty in May to leaving the scene of an accident and driving under the influence. (AP)

On the Internet, No One Knows If You're Embittered

ALANIS MORISSETTE is engaged. The 30-year-old singer says her boyfriend, actor Ryan Reynolds, has asked her to marry him, according to Us Weekly magazine. The couple hasn't set a date yet. Morissette and the star of the movie "National Lampoon's Van Wilder" started dating by e-mail two years ago. Reynolds, 27, flew to Ottawa to ask Morissette's parents for permission to propose to her — which the singer didn't know about. He also helped design her emerald-cut platinum ring, and got down on one knee to give it to her. (AP)

Does He, Like, Have Time Off From Running the U.N.?

BONO has joined a Silicon Valley venture capital firm that plans to invest in media and entertainment projects. The 44-year-old singer is joining the newly created Elevation Partners, based in Menlo Park, The Wall Street Journal reported Tuesday. The new venture aims to raise $1 billion. The venture fund was launched by technology investor Roger McNamee and John Riccitiello, former president of videogame maker Electronic Arts

Stalemate, My Friend

PRINCE has filed a counterclaim Monday in Hennepin County District Court, alleging a student invaded his privacy and violated trademark and copyright law. Anthony Fitzgerald sued Prince and his bodyguard in April for damages of at least $50,000. Fitzgerald claims he was assaulted at the airport Dec. 29 and that his camera was confiscated when he took a photo of Prince. Prince's counter-suit also seeks at least $50,000 in damages. (AP)

TO THE EDITOR

THE ARTICLE "Court Spares 'Under God'" (June 15) begins, "The U.S. Supreme Court on Monday allowed millions of schoolchildren to keep affirming loyalty to one nation 'under God.'"

Schoolchildren have always been allowed, and, hopefully, always will be allowed to affirm their faith in God, even in our public schools. The issue here is that the schoolchildren who do not participate, as I myself did not, are routinely intimidated, harassed or worse.

Just as schoolchildren are free to pray in school, without official direction, so they should be free to acknowledge God in the Pledge. The rest of us should be spared the abuse.

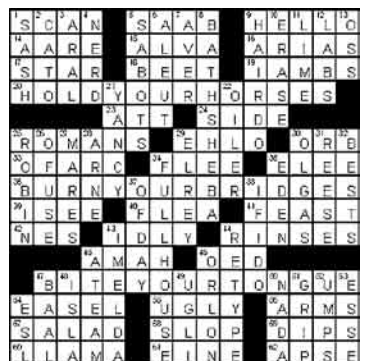

—JASON FORD
Washington, D.C.

Editor's note: A number of readers wrote in concerning the Express promotional contest advertised in Tuesday's paper offering a chance to win tickets to the IMAX feature "A Rainforest Adventure: Bugs! in 3D." Due to a technical glitch we were unable to take entries online. The ad will appear again in upcoming issues, at which time we will be accepting online entries.

Horoscope | Stella Wilder

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Time spent with a special friend is time that offers you more in the way of self-discovery and positive outlook.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — You may be unusually gullible, and you must take care that someone who knows you too well doesn't try to take advantage of you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — You may be worrying unnecessarily about a friend or family member. It's a good time to refocus your energy on a pivotal personal project.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — You may have to endure a little hardship to make the progress you've looked forward to in recent days and weeks. Be patient.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — Are you being too cool, aloof and objective? There is no danger in getting closer to the action.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — Catering to the needs of someone else can be good for your mind, for your body and for your soul. Generosity breeds positive energy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — Don't be overly sentimental; you have an important issue to address, and you must maintain an objective point of view.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Avoid ambiguous advice, especially if it sounds like rehash. Try to find positive answers from life experiences and loved ones. Step outside and take in some fresh air.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — You may be uptight and uncertain throughout much of the day, so you were best to keep even minor decisions to a minimum.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — You must be prepared to deal with issues that seem to spring up from nowhere. Someone will show you the truth in a new form.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — You'll learn something you never knew if you'll only ask someone a simple question or two. You'll win respect even from the experts.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — Remember the saying if it isn't broken, don't fix it — and apply it to your own endeavors. You may be meddling where you needn't.

Anti-America

From washingtonpost.com/liveonline

JEFFERSON MORLEY, a staff writer at washingtonpost.com, was online Tuesday to discuss the growth of anti-Americanism around the world as reported by the international online media in recent weeks.

Would a change in the presidency help smooth the anti-America position much of the world has taken?

The election of John Kerry and reversal of some of President Bush's more unilateralist actions would probably dampen softer forms of anti-Americanism (in Canada and Australia, for example).

But there might be less change than you think. South Korean anti-Americanism has been fueled by traffic accidents and crimes involving U.S. soldiers in South Korea, the sort of thing a president has little control over. In the Arab press, Kerry is viewed as virtually identical to Bush on the Israeli-Palestinian issue and not much different on Iraq.

It would appear that we have a real crisis in relations with our best, most steadfast allies. What needs to be done to turn this around?

I would say that the rise of anti-Americanism is a crisis in the sense that it is something that must be dealt with instantly. I would say it's a big and growing problem. The fact that Korean public opinion played a major role in forcing change of a U.S. military commitment that had not changed much in 50 years is a sign of a new reality. The Bush administration appears to be aware of this new reality in a way that they were not a year or two ago.

What do foreign folks/media think about the passing of Ronald Reagan?

The overseas response to Reagan's passing was less affectionate, in general, than the U.S. media's response.
